AT Conference Acquires Mix Meeting's Conferencing Division

AT Conference's extensive suite of conference call and web conferencing services will now be available to Mix Meeting customers.

NEW YORK, September 5, 2008 — AT Conference, Inc., a leading provider of conference call and web conferencing services, today announced it has completed the acquisition of Mix Meeting LLC's Milwaukee, Wisconsin-based conferencing division.

AT Conference is pleased to provide its new clients with an extended suite of conferencing services including electronic billing, international toll-free access, usage reports, operator-assisted services and 24 hour support.

David Jannetti, AT Conference's CEO, announced, "I'm pleased that our new customers will soon enjoy the easy-to-use services that last month established AT Conference as 2007's 7th Fastest Growing Telecommunications Company in New York and the 80th in the entire USA according to Inc Magazine. Our team is excited to work with Mix Meeting as this transition is completed by October 31st."

Mix Meeting CEO, Matthew Lautz, said, "AT Conference's approach and business philosophies are very similar to Mix Meeting's. Working with them through this transition has been a very positive experience and confirms that this is the right fit. We are confident that AT Conference will provide customers with the same level of excellent service they experienced with Mix Meeting, along with some of the enhanced features that they have been requesting."

Lautz said that Mix Meeting will focus on continuing the rapid growth of their wholesale VoIP services division once the transition of the conferencing customers to AT Conference is complete. Mix Meeting added wholesale VoIP termination and origination services to its telecom product suite in 2007 and now routes over one billion minutes of voice traffic annually.

The financials of the acquisition were not disclosed as both companies are privately held.
